

LANCET PSYCHIATRY COMMISSION ON THE PSYCHOSES IN A GLOBAL CONTEXT: REQUEST FOR PARTICIPATORY &/OR USER- LED RESEARCH, COMMENTARIES & REPORTS

The Lancet Commission on the Psychoses in a Global Context consists of a group of researchers, policy makers, clinicians, family members and service users convened to produce a comprehensive knowledge synthesis and vision for future research and development focused on psychosis. As part of the overall Commission, the lived experience/psychosocial disabilities involvement workgroup will be conducting a systematic review of studies and reports focused on psychosis that have utilized participatory methods (spanning user/survivor-led research, co-production, participatory action research and so on). While we will conduct traditional searches of the academic literatures, due to the variety of terms used internationally and variations in reporting of methods or lived experience/stakeholder involvement, we are seeking self-submissions of relevant work in the following categories:

- Peer reviewed research studies of any kind (autoethnographic qualitative, quantitative, etc.) led or co-led by researchers who identify as service users/persons with psychosocial disability/lived experience;
- Peer-reviewed research studies of any kind (qualitative, quantitative, mixed methods) that have included an explicit service user/psychosocial disability and/or family participation component;
- Doctoral dissertations or theses that would otherwise meet the above criteria and have not (yet) been published;
- Commentaries specifically focused on psychosis (language, subjective experience, service reform, innovation, human rights, etc.) and that are led or co-produced by authors with personal experience of psychosis, whether they appear in academic or non-academic venues;
- Self nominated studies or evaluations using participatory methodologies that have not been published in a peer-reviewed academic journal (ie 'grey literature' texts) but that include some description of methodology (who the sample is, what methods were used, how data was analyzed).
- Note that submissions can be in any language - we are actively working on developing translated versions of the flyer and survey: please contact us to request a copy in another language.
