

21st Annual Summer Program in Social & Cultural Psychiatry

Indigenous Mental Health Research

June 15-18, 2015
Montréal, Québec

Red Sky's migration chart. (Drawing by B. Nemeth. Courtesy of the University of Toronto Press, Glenbow Museum.)

This workshop will survey recent work on the social determinants of mental health and discuss issues in the design and implementation of culturally-appropriate mixed-methods research with Indigenous communities and populations. The emphasis will be on conceptual issues and the development of research methodology to address both common and severe mental health problems and interventions. Specific topics will include: indigenous concepts of well-being; developmental perspectives on identity and resilience; community-based participatory research; empowerment evaluation; substance use research methods; truth and reconciliation in mental health; land and place in healing; scaling up mental health promotion programs; culturally based interventions.

Faculty

Laurence Kirmayer, McGill (Course Director)

Amy Bombay, Dalhousie University

Jacob Burack, McGill

Gregory Brass, McGill

Eduardo Chachamovich, McGill

Sarah Fraser, Université de Montréal

Kathryn Gill, McGill

Arlene Laliberté, U Québec en Abitibi-Témiscamingue

Bonnie Leadbeater, University of Victoria

Kim Matheson, Carleton University

Lisa Stevenson, McGill

Caroline Tait, University of Saskatchewan

Co-sponsored by

RÉSEAU DE
RECHERCHE EN
SANTÉ
MENTALE CHEZ LES AUTOCHTONES

NETWORK FOR ABORIGINAL MENTAL HEALTH
RESEARCH

Registration

For more information and online registration:

<http://www.mcgill.ca/tcpsych/training/summer/>

Administrator: Consuelo Errazuriz

Email: tcpsych@mcgill.ca

NAMHR Annual Meeting, June 19, 2015

Division of Social & Transcultural Psychiatry
Department of Psychiatry

www.mcgill.ca/tcpsych

